

Guiding vision to concrete fruition

The signing of the amalgamation contract by Director - Johan Richards (formerly SVP Quantity Surveyors and Project Managers) and Bingelela Investments CEO Sizwe Khumalo

'BCP are leaders in the market at the moment by showing developers in the local community that Richards Bay indeed has the power of local consultants,'

said Garth Macartney, former ZCB president

THIS year sees the dawning of a new day for two local companies as they merge to form a strong project management and consulting house.

Bingelela Investments has bought a 30% stake in SVP Quantity Surveyors and Project Management.

The newly-formed company - Bingelela Consulting Professionals (BCP), will not only undertake work in the booming industrial developments but also in the private and public sectors.

BCP offers a complete project management package from conception to taking care of quantity surveys, project management, architectural, civil and construction issues while at the same time maintaining a strong focus on the operational aspects of the final product.

Industrial projects

When commissioned BCP will provide consulting services throughout the duration of the project.

'We add value and new dimensions,' said Marketing Manager, Sizwe Khumalo.

The BCP team is familiar with the industrial processes of most businesses both regionally and nationally.

This comes from more than 45 years of combined theoretical and industrial experience as well as networking found within the team.

Fresh start

The change of name symbolises a new day and a fresh start for BCP. By combining the company name with the slogan 'unity, power, prosperity', management believe that they have the identity that embodies their vision and commitment to industry.

BCP is serious about business and the necessity for transformation.

The company fully supports the Government in its initiatives towards creating a better life for all South Africans.

Joining forces

The idea of an amalgamation began in 2006 when both companies saw qualities in each other which were stimulating and redefined the reasons for being in business.

'This literally happened, the potential of this new company is very exciting.

'We are excited about building relationships, the rest will follow,' said Director, Johan Richards.
